DICTIONARIE, CORRECTED, AND AVGMENTED WITH THE

Addition of many hundred words, both out of the Law, and out of the Latine, French, and other Languages, such as were and are with vs in common vse, but neuer printed vntill now, to the perfecting of the Worke.

HEREVNTO ARE ANEXED CERTAINE

Tables explaining the names, weights, and valuations of antient and moderne coynes, as also a Table of the Hebrew, Greeke, and Latine measures, reduced to our English Standard and Assise.

Whereunto is ioyned a Dictionarie Etymologicall, deriuing each word from his proper fountaine; the first that euer was extant in this kinde: with many worthy castigations and Additions, as will appeare in the Title and Epistle before it.

Clarissimo viro, ac bonarum literarum summo patrono, D. Francisco Walsinghamo, Equiti aurato, Ducatus Lancastrensis Cancellario, & Regiæ Maiestati a sacris Consilijs, & Secretario principali I. R. Felicitatem præcatur perpetuam.

ERIVS omnino quam volebam, aliquando tamen novus hic partus in lucem prodijt, quod flagitabam equidem quotidie: quippe in parturiendo. At enim humeris meis (donec prolem in amplexu habuerim) mihi sustinere videbar. Sed in orbis theatrum prodijt tandem & tuis auspicijs (illustrissime Walsingham) prodijt, quod me summa de tua singulari humanitate concepta spes, & magna quædam approbandæ tibi, si minus eruditionis, ac certe voluntatis meæ, cupiditas impulit. Quem enim vspiam hominum mortalium hæc doctærum tempestate melius compellarent literæ, quam illum ipsum, literas & literatos omnes incredibili amore prosequitur, eosque apud sui similes, apud dissimiles, apud vniuersos, plurimi facit, & veneratur. Et, (vt interim taceam de cæteris virtutibus) vtræque te Academia laudant, suspiciunt, & admirantur. Quippe à te lumen, à te subsidium habent, tuique ipsas magnificentia adauctum sibi honorem sentiunt, sed plura non addam, Amplitudo tua laudes istas, tametsi iustas & meritas, raro & ægrè feret. Potuit quidem vir summus, hæc quidquid est operæ, & industrie nostræ, nobilissimus heros COMES SVSSEXIÆ (cui priuatum sum ex officio deuotus) iure quasi suo vindicare: Potuit etiam vir ornatissimus, GVLIELMVS WAADVS, (qui mihi & auctor in consilijs capiendis, & adiutor in rebus agendis exiit) non repetere modò, sed assumere etiam, & quodam modo postulare: vterque tamen mihi dii consulares tibi que intimi, non solum suaserunt, sed etiam persuaferunt, vt te deum mortalem & tutelarem mihi eligerem, tuamque amplitudinem enixè & vehementer rogarem, vt primum hunc meum infantulum, adhuc rudem & impolitem, honorifice adoptares. Pater sum sed inops, non possum alere: pater sum, sed impotens, non possum aduersus malarum bestiarum morsus dentesque defendere. Nudus est adhuc infans, patre opulento; infirmus est patrono forti & magnanimo opus habet. Te igitur (vir honoratissime) obsecro & obtester, vt ei pater & patronus fias; vtque tuis felicibus auspicijs & fascijs suis in lucem exeat, vagire desinat: Syllabas, voces sensus articulatim enunciare discat, doceat tyrones & commilitiones suos, Reipub. decore & officiosè inseruiat. Dum tenerior est, quæso, sub seuto tuo se totum tegat, ne Momus lingua, ne Zoilus vngue infantem vulneret. Te Deus opt. max. incolumem Reipub. Academiæ mihi que diutissime conferuet: Oxoniæ, Calend. Octob.

TO THE READER.

Courteous Reader, I may seeme to some over bold in setting forth a new treasure of words to the world, when the works of so honourable and learned men, who have laboured in this kinde, are so learnedly penned, and highly esteemed, In truth I must, and doe most willingly confesse, that neither in age, wit, learning or experience, I am to be compared with the least of them; nay, wist to carry the booke, where some of the honorable Learned should reade the Lesson; whose learned labours have yeelded these many yeares to England great profit. Yet notwithstanding considering the great utilitie of a Dictionary whose matter is manifold, and use generall, and also that no one Dictionary, as yet extant, hath the English before the Latine, with a full Index of all such Latine words as are in any one common Dictionary amongst vs: and because the poore estate of most students is not able to furnish themselves with all such Dictionaries, their severall prices amounting to so much, and also weighing the great want that poore scholars have, in not having most, or all of the common Dictionaries: I have thought it good therefore, for thy benefit, courteous Reader, to epitomize and contract the learned works of all the learnedst and best Dictionaries in England with vs now extant, into a lesser roome, reducing all those learned Volumes into a portable Enchiridion, and into so great treasures to call, for thy use, some small mites of my owne, which amount to foure thousand words more than any one Dictionary now extant offords. Which I have done not without great paines and charges: which heauie burthen of charge, if it had not bene supported by the Right Honourable, my very good Lord, the Earle of Suffex, and the Right Worshipfull Master William Waade Esquire, one of the Clerkes of her Maiesties most Honourable privie Counsell, with other of my good louing parishioners of Earmaestry nere London; and good friends in and nere Banburie, it might haue beene said of me, as it was of the foolish builder, This man began to build, but was not able to make an end. But at last, though long, by Gods providence, it is come to this issue, that I must present it (howseuer it be finished) to thy courteous view and friendly censure: requesting thee to reprove with iudgement charitably what I haue ouer past in haste: in recompence whereof, I will be no lesse willing to reforme, than thy courttesie to admonish. Thus assuring my selfe, that thou (learned Reader) wilt my faults escaped, either with thy pen correct, or in courttesie conceale, remembering that the shadowes of young painters may haue some blemishes, and first editions of young writers (yea, and best workes) some faults, I commit thee (Gentle Reader) to his iudition, that must present thee and mee faultlesse, in his owne righteousnesse, before the great Iudge at the comming of our Lord Iesus Christ.
